OUR COMMITMENT to CREATION

For me, the design of something, and the materials used to make the designed object, are inseparable. I can't imagine drawing an idea without contemplating how it will be made and of what it will be made. The materials and fabrication techniques inform the design, just as the opposite is true.

I have been fortunate to have great freedom in designing or directing the creation of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of objects across a wide range of products and materials. I love being in workshops and factories, working with the artisans that make our products where I learn so much. Watching their methods, seeing their equipment, and understanding their process and materials informs everything that we do.

Our new Murano glass and stone lighting and our new carved stone sinks are revealed in this issue. These collections reflect a view into our curiosity and experience. They are based on our deep connections to the artisanal legacy and engineering prowess found in Northern Italy, where we also make some of our most exciting bath fittings. The new sinks and lights are a beautiful combination of careful design and extraordinary materials. We have created them to complement everything else in your home and provide distinctive and special layers in your design projects. Enjoy!

THE TIMELESS ALLURE of MURANO Glass

An enduring art form reimagined, our Murano glass lighting collections draw from centuries of tradition and craftsmanship, honed through generations. By collaborating directly with innovative artisans, we honor these historic techniques while pushing their limits—creating designs that are both original and unexpected.

3 Artful Techniques

Rostrato

A technique used to give our glass a unique sculptural appearance through hand-worked protrusions, meticulously shaped by master glassmakers using specialized tools. These reliefs create a richly textured surface that scatters light in dynamic ways, generating depth and unexpected brilliance.

Battuto

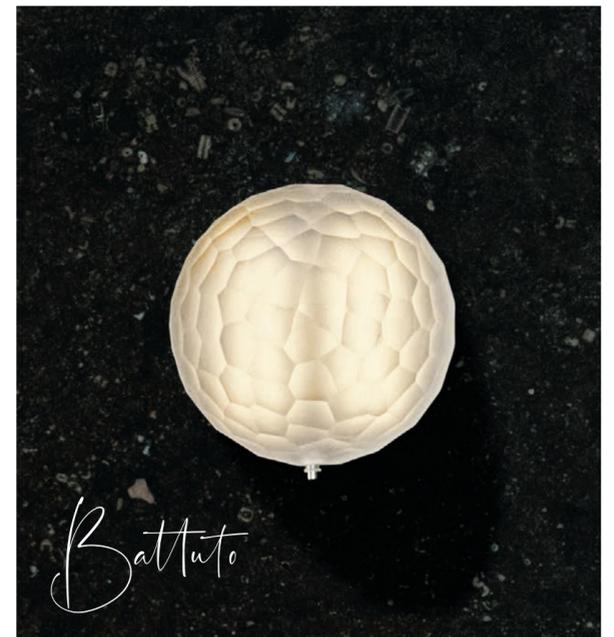

In this meticulous cold engraving process, the glass is gently abraded with diamond wheels to produce a textured pattern reminiscent of hammered metal. This technique lends the surface both dimension and a velvety feel, bridging traditional craftsmanship with contemporary sensibilities.

Vetro Lastre

Artisans pour molten glass into sheets and shape it into pure, elemental forms with alluring variations in thickness and clarity. The method creates undulations directly into the material, giving the glass its distinctive character and translucence.
